

The Moroccan culture is so vast and diversified, each one being special and charming in its own way. Different food, different accent, different architecture. It is why Morocco is a worldwide destination for tourists due to the wide choice of experiences. So, I'll be a bit more specific and will talk about the northern side of the Moroccan culture. It is mostly known for its blue shades that are honestly so calming and peaceful, there are beaches everywhere (so clear and translucent), and the accent is so particular and classy! It really gives off summer vacations vibes. It's also characterized by a very unique piece of clothing called hayk, a kind of a long white dress that covers the entire body of a woman, it's honestly so beautiful, in addition to a small cloth that covers the face too. There's also Atazir, a red and white striped garment worn by women as well. Now let's talk about the best part, food! Among the most famous ones, there's harcha, it kind of resembles bread but made with semolina flour. And it goes so well with cheese on the inside and a cup of tea. It's sooo delicious , 10 out of 10, totally recommend.
